Medical Exam Consent

Medical Doctors/Medical Staff working at Gateway Children's Advocacy Center (GCAC) have years of experience in examining children for possible abuse. The exam for sexual abuse involves a check-up with a Colposcope. The Colposcope is a camera that magnifies with a light attached, allowing photos to be taken; these photos will become part of the child's medical record. The medical exam is done in a child-friendly room with movies playing – the child can zone out, color, or read a book. Children can bring (1) an adult to the medical room.

The Doctor will be looking at the outer genitals – nothing is invasive or inserted into the child. If the child is having a discharge or other symptoms, cultures may be obtained by swabbing the genitalia with a Q-tip. This exam should not be traumatic or painful, and most children should be calm and not mind. Once the evaluation is complete, treatment or further assessment may be recommended for the child. Remember, however, an exam may not indicate if the child has been abused. 90% of all children who HAVE been abused have NORMAL exams, even with a HISTORY of penetration, so the medical exam alone does not prove abuse. One advantage of the medical exam is that it allows the Doctor to assure the child/family that their body is okay and enables the child/family to ask questions about their body.

Computer equipment in the Medical Room will store your child's medical information. Your child's medical records are confidential at GCAC and accessed only by GCAC's Doctors/Medical Staff. If your child is referred for a 2nd opinion – paper records (not pictures) will be sent to that Doctor. If the child requires blood work or urine screening, those will be sent to the hospital for results per chain of custody and shared information. The medical information gathered by this means may be used as evidence in a court of law or in connection with enforcing public health rules and regulations. A report will be sent to the referral agency and, if needed, to your child's Doctor with your permission. If the case goes to court, the physician may be required to testify, and copies of medical records may be submitted as evidence. Otherwise, all information collected during the evaluation or treatment will remain confidential. If any information obtained during the assessment is used to train or is reviewed by other professionals, the child's and the family's identity will not be revealed.

There are no known risks for the child or the family having this exam. There is a benefit in that this evaluation may answer our questions and identify a need for treatment, which may benefit the child and the family. You are encouraged to ask the doctors/medical staff any questions.
